

Giovanni Sarnelli is a full professor of Gastroenterology involved in the study of digestive and nutritional pathophysiology in the Department of Clinical Medicine and Surgery, University of Naples "Federico II". He currently heads the Digestive and Nutritional Pathophysiology Unit and the Digestive Motility Laboratory, where he coordinates clinical, diagnostic, and research activities focused on functional gastrointestinal disorders, neurogastroenterology, and the study of interactions between the microbiota, diet, and the enteric nervous system. He conducts and coordinates national and international research projects, collaborating with multidisciplinary groups and contributing to the development of innovative diagnostic and therapeutic approaches.